Dear Colleague:

I am writing to ask you to be with us at the first Inaugural Lecture to be given at Liberal Arts College. This marks the beginning of a fine series of annual talks opening the academic work of each new year. It is an honour for us that the first Lecture will be given by

George Rudé (History, Concordia)

(Wine and Cheese Reception to follow)

Professor Rudé, first Director of Montreal's Interuniversity Centre for European Studies (ICES/CIEE) and a Fellow of this College from its inception, is one of Canada's most renowned historians. Author of The Crowd in the French Revolution, Wilkes and Liberty, Paris and London in the 18th Century, Robespierre, Captain Swing (with Eric Hobsbawm) and Revolutionary Europe 1715-1815, among many other books and articles, he is one of our greatest historians of modern Europe.

We especially hope you can share this occasion with us because Professor Rudé has kindly agreed to grace Liberal Arts College with his name and example: his will be the first of the annual George Rudé Inaugural Lectures.
